

COMPONENTS OF A SIMPLE QUIT PLAN

Review own smoking behavior

Use pack wraps.

Identify personal motivators

List reasons why quitting, list benefits and costs, financial concerns. Put this list on the refrigerator or carry in your pocket; read it as often as necessary.

Make a list of social supports

Tell people you are quitting, ask for their help (specifically, what is helpful), find people who are really supportive, tell them what would be helpful, what isn't, avoid people who are not empathetic, find support groups to attend, or other resources, it's OK to be assertive.

Prepare to taper

Make it reasonable with doable goals.

Set a quit date

Within 2 weeks, pick a day when there is low stress.

Prepare the environment

Throw out ash trays, clean the house or car, practice not smoking in car or house or at work, make smoke-free areas, have teeth cleaned.

Identify specific triggers and strategies to lessen/avoid them

Give examples of common triggers and solutions. i.e., alcohol, social situations, friends who smoke, morning routines, coffee, work breaks, after eating, phone, certain people, driving, watching TV, relaxing, celebrating.

Identify biggest concerns

Challenges, high-risk situations and strategies to cope with them. i.e., avoid usual smoking places or other smokers, make a plan if there is a spouse smoking at home, what to do at work during smoke breaks, how to deal with certain social situations.

Manage urges and use of alternatives

Create a list of coping techniques, how to deal with negative moods, anger, frustration, etc. that often trigger the urge to smoke. Avoid or minimize stress if possible.

Discuss use of the 4 D's

Deep breath, drink water, delay, do something else.

Explore what worked in past and what might be helpful now

For Example: use straws, paper clips, have tea, go for a walk, walk the dog, try yoga, play with the kids, brush your teeth, meditate, listen to music, try relaxation exercises, hot baths, , meditate, pray.

Start a new hobby, think of new things to do to keep busy. Ask: "What are the things that make me happy?"

Identify relapse prevention strategies and plan for them

Caution against being overconfident, anticipate or minimize stress, learn how to use positive self talk, stick with an exercise program, change lifestyle to avoid people and places where there is smoking.

Plan strategies for dealing with weight gain

Exercise plan, healthy snacks, water, plan ahead, straws, cinnamon gum and... try to accept a little weight gain.
